Every student in From Data to Impact runs the class's pricing survey at their own school — or at a dance, music, or sports studio where families gather — and, later in the season, asks for a small sales table. The students ask for that permission themselves. Here is why the course is built this way, and what they learn.

Why adults don't do it for them. The simplest arrangement would be a letter from the club to each school. The course would still work. But walking up to a teacher and asking for something — clearly, briefly, with an answer ready for every question — is one of the few skills that matters in every job, every application, and every project a young person will ever run. The club's Student Charter draws the line plainly: students draft, ask, and recommend; adults hold the guardrails for money, contracts, and safety. Asking for permission sits on the students' side of that line. A formal letter from an Adult Advisor is ready the moment a school asks for one — and goes second, not first.

What the students are taught to do. Each student receives a short guide. Beneath the instructions are four strategies, named so that students recognize them next time:

1. Small ask first. A two-minute survey in October; a sales table in November, after a yes and a smooth survey have built trust. Bundling both would raise the bar for both.
2. Weigh the risk yourself. The guide sets out the options honestly, with what each one risks, and leaves the decision to the student. Reading the risks and deciding — with reasons written down — is the business judgment; the outcome is not.
3. Ask the right person, the right way. Someone who knows you; someone whose own program your project makes look good; someone who can say yes without escalating; a moment when yes is easy. In person when possible, with a one-line email afterward as the record.
4. Prepare before you ask. Three sentences about the course, the club, and the mission, said without notes; a page to hand over; answers ready for the questions every adult asks — who is in charge, where the money goes, whether anything is religious, how much time it takes; the lines only adults can cross; the ask practiced out loud; a pen to write down the answer, including no.

"No" is part of the curriculum. Some schools decline; some studios say "let me think about it." Students write every answer down, say thank you, and try the next door — because that is what selling anything is, and because the record of every no becomes part of the season's impact report.

What schools can expect. The survey collects no names or contact information — only whether someone would buy, what they would pay, and a grade level. It runs only at recess, lunch, or before and after school, never during class or chapel; participation is voluntary and anonymous; a student who prefers not to answer is thanked and left alone. Students never handle money, sign anything, or promise anything; if asked to, they stop and contact the club's Adult Advisors the same day. A formal letter, the survey wording, and the procedure are available on request from packwithloveclub@gmail.com.

What families can do. Not make the call for them. Rehearse the thirty-second ask with them, as a slightly difficult teacher. When they succeed, ask how they did it; when they don't, ask what they'd change.

From Data to Impact 的每一位学生都在自己的学校——或在家庭聚集的舞蹈、音乐、体育工作室——完成班级的定价调查，并在季末申请一张小的销售桌。这些许可由学生自己去申请。以下说明课程为什么这样设计，以及学生从中学到什么。

为什么成人不替他们做。最简单的安排是俱乐部给每所学校发一封信，课程照样能运行。但走到老师面前、清楚简短地提出请求、对每个问题都有准备好的回答——这是年轻人未来每一份工作、每一次申请、每一个自己主持的项目里都要用到的少数几种能力之一。俱乐部的学生章程把线画得很清楚：学生起草、请求、建议；成人守护资金、合同和安全的边界。申请许可在学生那一边。学校要求时，成人顾问的正式信件随时可以发出——但它是第二步，不是第一步。

学生被教会做什么。每位学生拿到一份简短的指南。操作步骤之下是四条策略，指南把它们点名，让学生下次能认出来：

1. 先小后大。10月一个两分钟的调查；11月，在一个 yes 和一次顺利的调查建立信任之后，再请求销售桌。两件事捆在一起，两件事的门槛都会抬高。
2. 自己权衡风险。指南诚实地列出各个选项和各自的风险，然后把决定交给学生。读懂风险、做出决定、写下理由，这就是商业判断；结果不是。
3. 问对人、用对方法。认识你的人；你的项目能让他的项目更好看的人；不需要请示就能说 yes 的人；yes 最容易说出口的时机。能当面问就当面问，之后发一行邮件作为记录。
4. 开口前先准备。不看稿说出关于课程、俱乐部和使命的三句话；一页可以递过去的材料；每个成年人都会问的问题——谁负责、钱去哪儿、有没有宗教内容、占多少时间——先写好答案；知道哪些线只有成人能跨；大声练过；带一支笔把回答写下来，包括 no。

"No" 是课程的一部分。有些学校会拒绝，有些工作室会说"让我想想"。学生把每个回答写下来、说谢谢、去敲下一扇门——因为销售本来就是这样，也因为这份 no 的记录会成为季末影响力报告的一部分。

学校可以预期什么。调查不收集姓名和联系方式——只问会不会买、愿付多少和年级。只在课间、午餐或课前课后进行，从不在上课或礼拜时间；自愿、匿名；不愿回答的学生得到一声谢谢，不再被打扰。学生从不经手钱、不签任何东西、不承诺任何事；若被要求，当天停下并联系俱乐部的成人顾问。正式信件、问卷措辞和操作说明可向 packwithloveclub@gmail.com 索取。

家庭可以做什么。不要替他们打这个电话。陪他们练那三十秒的话术，当一位稍微难缠的老师。成功了，问他是怎么做到的；没成功，问他下次会改什么。
